Series Editors: Megan O'Neill, University of Dundee, Marisa Silvestri, University of Kent and Stephen Tong, Canterbury Christ Church University

"I really like this concise series of books on key issues in policing and criminal justice. They offer great up-to-date introductions to the policies and academic debates."

Anna Barker, University of Leeds

Key Themes in Policing is a series designed to fill a growing need to incorporate research-informed policing within higher education curriculums and in practice. Edited by three experienced policing scholars, these authoritative texts reflect the increasingly politicised, professionalised and scrutinised landscape of our contemporary policing and draw out both change and continuities in key areas of police work. For students, researchers and practitioners of policing and criminal justice, the series provides a comprehensive analysis of the research-based evidence available and reflects contemporary challenges. Books are available on inspection for lecturers who wish to consider adopting the books on their course.
