

Sex and Intimacy in Later Life

Series Editors: Paul Simpson, University of Manchester, Paul Reynolds, International Network for Sexual Ethics and Politics and The Open University and Trish Hafford-Letchfield, University of Strathclyde

Older people are commonly characterised as non-sexual, or their sexuality is considered a superficial concern in comparison to health, public services and pensions. This is despite evidence of an increase in sexual engagement amongst older people. Little academic attention has been given to this subject, or to the impact that this may have, such as increased rates of STI transmission or implications of healthy sex lives for care institutions.

This internationally focused series builds on, extends and deepens knowledge of sexual practice amongst older people. Pulling together work by established and emerging scholars across a range of disciplines, it covers the experiential, empirical and theoretical landscapes of sex and ageing.

Addressing diversity in sexual experience later in life, this book explores how being older intersects with ethnicity, gender, sexuality and class. It extends knowledge concerning intimacies, practices and pleasures for those thought to represent normative forms of sexual identification and expression.

Challenging stereotypes, this book investigates the experiential and theoretical landscapes of older people's sexual intimacies, practices and pleasures. It explores the impact of desexualisation and distinguishes the challenges older people face from the prejudices imposed on them.

Call for proposals

The Series Editors welcome proposals for books that represent current and innovative research on age, sex and sexuality. They particularly welcome books on the following themes:

- understanding older people's sexual and intimate lives;
- policy and practice change in supporting older people's sexual and intimate lives;
- technology and older people's sexual and intimate lives;
- recognition, diversity and sub-cultures in older people's sexual and intimate lives;
- representations of older people's sexual and intimate lives and their effects;
- constraints on older people's sexual and intimate lives and challenging any unequal and unreasonable restrictions.
